DIPHTHERIA

One of the most important features of the physical examinations of school children who are to enter school next fall, now being conducted throughout California, is the provision of protection against diphtheria. This disease, which for 30 years has been one of the most disastrous of all children's diseases, has now been made absolutely preventable. Every child who will enter school for the first time during the coming fall months should be immunized against diphtheria now. Parents can provide this safeguard for their children and insure them against contracting this serious disease. Any doctor of medicine can immunize against diphtheria. The procedure is simple, produces no ill effect and is in no way dangerous to the child. The wise parent will guard against the risk of having his child contract the disease by giving him the sure protection that immunization affords. If every child one year and over were immunized against diphtheria, it would soon be a vanishing disease.

Unlike most of the other communicable diseases of children, diphtheria has no characteristic eruption. It is caused by a germ infection which often leads to the formation of a grayish-white membrane in the throat or other air passages. Sometimes this membrane grows large enough to block the air passage and the patient virtually chokes to death. Sometimes there is no visible membrane, although the patient may suffer from an extremely severe type of the disease. This is due to the powerful toxins or poisons that are developed in the course of the disease. These poisons work terrific damage on the heart and other organs of the body. It is this fact that makes diphtheria one of the most devastating of all communicable diseases. Parents are justified in having a wholesome fear of this disease.

Children entering school for the first time make new contacts with other children from other neighborhoods and the risk of contracting communicable diseases at that time becomes greater. Immunization, therefore, is necessary in order that the child may not contract the disease. Every child has a right to be as healthy as human knowledge can make him. There is no better way to help a child than to provide him with adequate protection against contracting diphtheria. The parents' duty in the matter is plain and there should be no hesitation in securing immunization. Some health authorities say that the time is coming when every death from diphtheria will be looked upon as one of criminal negligence and, therefore, a case for a coroner's jury to act upon. At the present time there is no excuse for failure to take advantage of this protective measure. The wise parent will have his children immunized against diphtheria without delay.

ARMY CHAPLAIN ACQUITTED ON GIRL CHARGE

Captain Orville I. Clappitt is Acquitted by Army Court Martial After a Lengthy Trial

(By Universal Service)
SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—Captain Orville I. Clappitt, United States Army Chaplain, was acquitted late today by the army court martial trying him on charges of falsely stating his relations with Miss Lucille Swallow, Kansas beauty parlor attendant.

The verdict of acquittal came shortly after 5 o'clock today after a lengthy trial.

Chaplain Clappitt took the witness stand himself in a final effort to clear his name and withstanding two hours after he had left the stand the board of army officers who tried him returned to verdict of "not guilty", completely vindicating the young minister who is a married man.

Captain Clappitt appeared about ready to break when his fate was announced. He declared he was thankful to all members of the court for the fair trial accorded him and declared his further plans were uncertain. He would not say whether he would remain in the army or resign, but made it clear he will continue his ministerial work. The court was out less than ten minutes when they arrived at their verdict. It was reported but not confirmed that the young army chaplain was given an unanimous acquittal.

Pipe Lines Are Threatened by Sinking of Road

MARTINEZ, April 19.—County engineers are working at top speed today to fill the section of the highway near Peyton, 100 by 40 feet, which suddenly sank to a depth of 10 feet on Saturday night, holding up traffic and threatening to snap three big pipe lines of the Associated Oil company. All traffic to Eastern Contra Costa county via the Bay Point road was shut off with the prospects of it being days before the road would go in a condition for traffic.

An unknown motorist almost drove through the sink on Saturday night. He became mired at the outskirts and was pulled out by a truck. He immediately notified the sheriff who posted guards over the sink. Preparations were immediately made to have the sink filled to the road level.

This portion of the highway has been built over the marshlands and for some time it has been threatening to sink. Recently the road was repaired and a fill was made. It is thought that the added weight of the fill caused the road to sink.

The sinking road caused three pipe lines of the Associated Oil company to rise above the surface and for some time it was thought that they might snap, thus cutting off the oil supply between Avon and the Bullhead refinery. Watchmen were posted by the company to watch the pipes during the night.

Condemned Men
To Die in Lethal
Gas Chamber

(By Universal Service)
CARSON CITY, April 19.—Lethal gas will for the second time in the history of the United States be used as the official means of execution by the State of Nevada during the week of May 16, it has been decided.

The condemned men are Stake Jukich, giant Australian laborer, who killed his 16 year old sweetheart at Ruth, Nevada when she refused to comply with a promise of marriage several years ago, and the second, Guadalupe Acosta, native Mexican, who killed a deputy sheriff of Elko.

Both men have had their appeals denied and the only possibility of clemency is through the state board of pardon. There is small possibility of the execution of the third man, John Randolph, convicted of having beaten his aged mother to death, according to the authorities. Clemency for the matricide has been asked by District Judge Thomas Moran.

Smith & Crane
Will Open new Store Today

Everything is in readiness at the new store of the Smith and Crane clothing establishment and this morning at nine o'clock the doors at the new location of the Richmond firm, 910 Macdonald avenue will be thrown open to the public.

The stock which during the past several days has been transferred from the former location, has been assembled at the new store, which is one of the most modern from the standpoint of equipment and fixtures in the Bay District. One of the chief features of the new store is the display windows, the firm spent considerable time inspecting other establishments throughout the state and finally decided upon the arcade type as best meeting the needs of their new store. The improvements of the interior were of such a nature as to necessitate the complete remodeling of the building. The store was lengthened by thirty feet assuring commodious quarters for the display and storage of the stock. Circassian walnut fixtures have been installed in the display windows which have backgrounds finished in tan. High-powered electric fixtures give a daylight effect to the displays. A valence of tan and gold adds to the decorative effect of the windows. A tiled checkerboard pattern completes the exterior of the building.

The same lines of merchandise which have been kept up the patronage of the Smith and Crane store will be carried at the new establishment, according to an announcement made by Clinton Smith. The public is invited to call at the new building today and inspect the improvements installed there. This new store marks the third move of the Smith and Crane firm since it was established here in 1917. The first store of the firm was located at 617 Macdonald avenue and the second at 617 Macdonald avenue. In 1918 the firm purchased the store building at 624 Macdonald avenue. The need for larger quarters necessitated the move into the new store. The firm will still continue to do business under the name of Smith and Crane although Clinton Smith has purchased the interest of E. C. Crane.

Butler's Host Found Guilty On Ram Charge

The accused officer probably read the verdict in Captain Walter's face.

Almost mechanically, he returned the salute.

"Sir, the court has concluded its deliberations and has adjourned," was the formal message brought by the provost marshal. Col. Williams, pale and wheeled about. His eyes misted, but his head was solidly erect as he walked slowly to his automobile in company with Major Putman and Capt. Clifton B. Cates, who joined him.

Capt. Cates was the only member of Col. Williams' military defense staff who would make any comment upon the findings of the court-martial board.

"Yes," he said "It means a conviction. If any recommendations have been added to the verdict, a mitigation of the sentence may be expected. It is up to Washington now."

The court did not announce the conclusion of its deliberation until 2:40 p. m., when Capt. Hermie, judge advocate gave notice of the final adjournment. It was learned however from authoritative sources that the verdict of guilty had been agreed upon at 11:30 a. m., about twenty minutes after the case was taken under consideration.

It also was reported that the court recommended that Col. Williams be punished by deduction in numbers. This does not necessarily mean that the convicted officer will forever lose his chance to become a brigadier general. Officers are now elevated to that rank by selection and not seniority.

Col. Williams may fall to the bottom of the list of colonels as a result of his conviction, but since there are only ten colonels his junior in the Marine service, reported reduction is not regarded as a severe punishment.

Tomorrow morning the members of the court will make "oral" approval of the record and the documents will be forwarded to the judge advocate general in Washington for examination.

The judge advocate general will then transmit the findings to the secretary of the navy with whatever recommendations he wishes to make and final action in the case will rest with Secretary Curtis D. Wilbur.

In taking its adjournment, the court recommended that Col. Williams be punished by deduction in numbers. This does not necessarily mean that the convicted officer will forever lose his chance to become a brigadier general. Officers are now elevated to that rank by selection and not seniority.

Col. Williams was specifically charged as "having been under the influence of liquor and incapacitated for duty" while at the fashionable hotel Coronado on the night of March 6th.

The hotel "drunk and dragged our" incident followed the party given at Col. Williams' home in honor of General Butler.

Junior High Boys To Publish Paper

An exclusive edition of the Blue Junior high school paper—exclusive in so far as the publication thereof is concerned, will make its appearance within a few weeks—for the boys are going to publish it alone. But, there is a but, for the girls are going to get out the publication on the following week and probably will return in full measure the commitments which they will receive in the boys number.

These publications will climax the competition in journalism which has been in progress at the Junior high school for some time.

MANY ATTEND K. P. PICNIC

Over two hundred people were in attendance at the picnic that was given by the Knights of Pythias on Sunday at the Pythian home at Santa Rosa. The Richmond lodge, Knights of Pythias, and the two Pythian Sister lodges, were in attendance. Boy Scout Troop No. 4, which is sponsored by the local Knights, were at the picnic also.

The court did not return to the courtroom and left the barracks immediately.

Members of the court other than Admiral Washington were: Col. F. M. Bradman, U. S. M. C.; Capt. John T. Tompkins, U. S. N.; Brig. Gen. Ben H. Fuller, U. S. M. C.; Capt. Joel R. Pringle, U. S. N.; Col. Louis L. Gulick, U. S. M. C. and Coy. James C. Breckenridge, U. S. M. C.

The concluding arguments were delivered by Lewis R. Kirby, civilian defense counsel, and Capt. Hermie, who had presented the prosecution.

In an eloquent plea for the acquittal of Col. Williams, attorney Kirby pictured General Butler as a "nervous wreck" and suggested he had previously erred in bringing Col. Williams to trial from drunkenness.

Capt. Hermie scored the defense that Col. Williams had been ill, rather than drunk, as "a smoke screen and camouflage."

Col. Williams was specifically charged as "having been under the influence of liquor and incapacitated for duty" while at the fashionable hotel Coronado on the night of March 6th.

The hotel "drunk and dragged our" incident followed the party given at Col. Williams' home in honor of General Butler.

"QUO VADIS" NOW SHOWING AT RICHMOND

The motion picture "fan" of today demands thrills, adventure, love interest and something to carry home and think about.

In "Quo Vadis" First National's gigantic film version of the Scienciewicz novel, he will get all of this and more. He will have more thrills than he ever had in one evening in his life; he will behold love that transforms base metal into pure gold; he will see the downfall of the most autocratic government in ancient times and the birth and spread of the Christian faith.

"Quo Vadis" is one of the most absorbingly interesting and thrilling productions that has ever been screened. It is correct historically, delightful artistically and perfect in detail and perspective, besides being a profound psychological study.

The scene is Rome in the time of Nero, most corrupt of the Caesars, when the Eternal City was the melting pot of the world. The contrast between Nero and the Apostle Peter, the Emperor's favorite Augustus and Lygia, the Christian maiden, with the transformation of Lygia's life and character through his love for Lygia are as vivid as anything in the drama or in literature. The scenes are tremendously real and spectacular.

Nothing more realistic has ever been accomplished in photographic art than the portrayal of the great royal banquets, the burning of Rome and the scenes in the arena—the tossing of the Christians to the lions, Ursus' rescue of Lygia from the back of the raging bull, and others.

Emil Jannings, whose characterizations in "Passion," "Deception" and other pictures, won him international fame, has the role of Nero and carries off the honors of the production.

American screen patrons are introduced to a new type of hero in the person of Lillian Hall Davis, noted English star, as Lygia, who makes her debut on the screen in this country and gives promise of becoming a favorite here.

"Quo Vadis" will be screened for the last time tonight at the Richmond Theatre.

"Dragon Alley," a juvenile comedy, with "Topics of the Day" and "Aesop's Fables," completes the program.

Corinne Griffith Proves Ability In California Film

Corinne Griffith did herself proud last night at the California Theatre where she opened in her latest First National release, "Infatuation." The little star held a large audience spellbound for two hours. It was a striking exhibition of the power of the unspoken word.

The film is an adaptation of W. Somerset Maugham's "Caesar's Wife," a recent Broadway stage hit. Although this reviewer was not privileged to see the play during its New York run, the perfect clicking of the screen version convinces him that no injustice was done to the work of the noted English dramatist.

The story concerns the plight of a neglected wife who allows herself to fall in love with her husband's secretary, but discovers before it is too late that it is her husband that she really loves after all.

Percy Marmont plays opposite includes Malcolm MacGregor, Warner Griffith, The supporting cast includes Oland, Leta Lorraine, Martha Mattox, Claire Daffrey and Clarissa Selwynne. Irving Cummings directed and Albert LeVine made the adaptation.

Railroad Track, River's Course And Island Are Moved to Make Way for the Victory Highway

TOPEKA, Kan., April 19.—The state highway engineers of Nevada are having a few well-earned nights of sleep. They have been busy for a long time, planning a bluish of honest pride now and again. They went into a certain canyon in the mountain portion of their state—a canyon already filled with a river and a railroad, with farms occupying such odd corners of land in the canyon bed as were neither railroad nor river.

To river and railroad alike, the Nevada engineers said, "lay over a little, can't you?" And the river and railroad have laid over to accommodate the Victory Highway. A river, a railroad and a broad, gently graded highway in one canyon—highway engineering, like politics, makes strange bed fellows.

The Truckee river flows in the mountains of western Nevada, west of Reno, and at one time had its canyon all to itself as it rushed between the precipitous walls down to the Pacific. Then the pioneers came along. The river obligingly made room for their little farms in the canyon which it had dug for itself. Followed the railroad, and the river edged over a little more, so that artery of travel might find lodging. Now there is a new era—the era of the automobile—with new demands, and the demand has been met in Nevada.

The Nevada and California highway departments agreed upon the Truckee canyon as the logical outlet for transcontinental traffic between the two states, on its way to California. And the engineers get about persuading the river that there was room for the highway in the canyon which it had obligingly dug through the ages before man came to hamper its course and preempt its territory.

There was a road of sorts through the canyon but it was not such a road as the average motorist rejoiced in. Constructed between the canyon walls it crossed and recrossed the river bed and the railroad tracks. Its grades were something awful, and in places it clung precariously to the sides of the canyon.

Now that is all changed. Once there were four railway crossings in the 14 miles of road between the city of Reno and the state line. All have been eliminated by the reorganization of the highway. At present there is a huge bluff on the north side of the river. The highway could not go through or around the bluff, and there was no room at its foot for highway, river and railroad. So the engineers reached out into the middle of the stream, seized the island, moved the island to the bank of the river, diverting the course of the stream, and put the railroad on the island—leaving a clear path past the foot of the cliff for the highway. It cost $101,203 to do it, but it is done. In the last half mile between the Cal and the California line, the grading alone cost $87,533 and included the removal of 1,734 carloads of rock. Most of this material was taken from two huge cuts, one of them seventy feet deep, and used to fill in ravines. The cost of the road is approximately $60,965.

The roadway has been surfaced with an 18-foot concrete pavement for a distance of 9.75 miles, leaving 4.25 miles to be paved later after the new fills have settled. California has taken up the work at the state line, and is carrying it on in the fashion which was set by Nevada.

Nevada, with the sparsest population of any state in the Union, has already completed or under construction, more than 1,000 miles of state highways, according to the report of the state highway commission to the headquarters of the Victory Highway association here.

The Nevada Highway News says: "This has been a vast undertaking but it has made the people of the state of Nevada just that much better off. They have paid for the roads without complaining and are clamoring for further improvement."

Mt. Diablo Folders Are Available at Chamber Commerce

Folders descriptive of Mount Diablo, guardian peak of Central California, which is generally regarded as one of the most scenic assets of this part of the state, have been received by the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, according to an announcement made by the Chamber.

While the Mount Diablo folder is descriptive chiefly of the mountain and the scenic boulevard which leads to its inspiring summit, considerable space has been given to a splendid map of Central California which shows all of the main highway connections with the roads leading to the Mount Diablo country and the mountain boulevard system.

Space has also been given to the historical, traditional and legendary backgrounds of Mount Diablo which make up the foundations for the fascinating literature that is identified with this noted peak.

The folder is generously illustrated with half-tones of genuine photographs. Copies of it may be obtained upon request at the Chamber if Commerce.

THE GENEVA FAILURE

In spite of the fact that the League of Nations met and adjourned without getting Germany into the organization, and even if everyone has gone home to try to forget about it for the time being, discussion of the situation seems to be as prolific as ever.

The principal fact that stands out of the whole mess from an American point of view, is that every American ought to be thankful that we were not members of the League when this March session was held.

There can be little doubt that the league members are gravitating back to the balance of power system. The intriguing that went on back and forth at Geneva is abundant proof of this. If the United States were in the League of Nations we would have been compelled to take some part in this, to favor one combination or another.

German delegates claimed that at Locarno they were given to understand that Germany would get into the council "as is" without the introduction of other members at the same time, which they characterized a "breach of promise." France on the other hand maintained that she had no such understanding and that Poland, as an ally of France, interested in the Locarno pact, with much at stake, ought to be in the council as a permanent member.

It was on this rock that the council split. True it was Brazil which finally broke up the meeting but nobody seriously believes that Brazil acted on her own accord. The kindness with which she has been treated by European powers since it is to say the least significant. But if the United States had been in the League we would have had to do one thing or another. We would have had to stand by France and insist on the admission of Poland to the council or to adopt the German view that she was the victim of a breach of faith and should have gone into the council alone. But France and Germany were not standing alone. There were other nations supporting each viewpoint and in making our decision we would have offended one group of powers or another. And the political questions involved were questions in which we have no concern.

The United States is a nation apart. We have drawn our citizens from all countries in Europe, and it is peculiarly necessary that we refrain from taking sides in purely European questions.

ANOTHER BIG BUILDING YEAR

If the present development in the United States keeps up during the balance of 1926 this will prove another six billion dollar building year according to the estimates of leading real estate men and architects.

The Architectural Forum recently predicted that the total amount of building would reach this figure, after making a very careful survey of the situation.

Approximately 778,000 new buildings will be added to the assets of the nation during the coming year, the Forum's study indicates. The classification of this new construction is estimated to be about as follows: New apartment buildings, large and small, 28,950; apartment hotels, 1,240; dwellings of cost under $10,000, including farm dwellings, 193,000; dwellings of a cost over $10,000, 589,000; industrial buildings, large and small, 9,782; office buildings, 3,074; schools, 3,898; stores, 7,842 and private garages 274,000.

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

With their initial success in arms, the friends of revolution became very bold everywhere. It was easy to mark the growth in the spirit of independence. The Continental Congress, coming together for its third annual session in May, 1776, urged the several colonies to provide themselves with regular and permanent governments an independent state, instead of continuing to make shift with committees of safety for executives and provisional "provincial congresses" for legislatures, as they had done since their government under the crown had fallen to pieces. Most of them showed an immediate disposition to take its advice. The resolution plainly declared "that the exercise of every kind of authority under the crown ought to be totally suppressed" and all the powers of government under authority from the people of the colonies—words equivalent to a declaration for entire separation from Great Britain. Even in the colonies where loyalists were strongest the government of the king had almost everywhere been openly thrown off.

By midsummer it was considered wisest to make a formal declaration of independence. North Carolina was the first to instruct her delegates to take the step, but most of the colonies were ready for it on July 4, 1776. Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence, which Thomas Jefferson had drawn up in the name of its committee.

The formal Declaration of Independence stiffened the resolution of everyone who had definitely sided with the popular cause. Just as Washington, who had favored it, foresaw that it would. But many a man of judgment and good feeling was deeply grieved and alienated and party differences within the colonies were made just so much the more bitter and irreconcilable.

Thousands of women in all parts of the United States listen to the Home Service Talks broadcast by Betty Crocker, nationally known food specialist from the following broadcasting stations: WEEI, Boston, Mass.; WJAF, New York, N. Y.; WCAE, Pittsburgh, Pa.; WGR, Buffalo, N. Y.; WEAR, Cleveland, Ohio; WHJ, Detroit, Mich.; WDAF, Kansas City, Mo.; WHT, Chicago, Ill.; WFI, Philadelphia, Pa.; KSD, St. Louis, Mo.; KFI, Los Angeles, Calif.; and WCCO, the Gold Medal Station, Minneapolis—Saint Paul. All of her recipes and discussions are based upon investigations and work of herself and her assistants in model kitchens.

By special arrangement the Record-Herald is now able to offer its readers this service which heretofore was given out exclusively over the radio.

DO not believe there is a mere popular subject in the whole realm of cookery than salad. We are always looking for new salads, and the nice part of it is, we usually find them, because the number of possible combinations is practically limitless. Since we make salads of fruits, vegetables, meats, nuts, cheeses, eggs and gelatin, it should be easy to have practically a different salad every day of the year. However, that is unnecessary as we prefer to serve our favorite salads over and over again.

I sometimes think we have gone too far in working out new salad combinations, as some of them are rather weird. Often they present a beautiful appearance and yet are unappetizing. Food should be attractive to the eye, and yet by no means should it offend the stomach. An overdecorated salad looks fussy and stuffy, just like an over-decorated room or an over-dressed woman. If you are a real artist, you can combine colors and flavors in a salad as an artist combines colors on a canvas. The different parts of the salad should blend together as tones of music to make one harmonious whole. Be careful that you do not allow a false note to creep in either as to color or flavor. Salad material should always be crisp and fresh. A wilted salad presents a most discouraged appearance, and is decidedly unappetizing.

Food Value of Salads
The food value of a salad varies greatly, according to the ingredients used. A substantial salad may serve as the main dish for lunch or supper. The more simple salads, although not so substantial, are equally valuable for the acids, minerals, and vitamins they supply to the body. At this time of the year, it is especially important that we serve salads if we would avoid bitter spring tonics later on. Fruit and vegetables are most important in our winter diet. During the cold months, it is not always easy or even possible to get fresh green salad foods, but there are so many possibilities for winter salads that we need never be without them. I will suggest a number of combinations that are possible at this time of the year.

Cabbage, probably our cheapest salad food, lends itself to many delicious salad combinations. The shredded cabbage should stand in cold water until very crisp before using. The combination of shredded cabbage with celery, pimiento or green pepper, is always good, and I like to use it with grated raw carrots as the yellow carrot on the white cabbage offers a very pretty contrast. Such a salad may be served with either mayonnaise or French dressing. A combination of cabbage and chopped peanuts is best served with mayonnaise dressing. If fruit is used with the cabbage, a cooked dressing may be preferred. The combination of cabbage, pineapple, and marshmallow with cooked dressing is very popular, and cabbage and apple are also used.

With a fish salad made of salmon, tuna, shrimp or crab, use something crisp, such as celery, peppers or chopped sweet pickle. Cabbage may be used in place of celery in such a salad and hard cooked eggs and nuts are often added.

A nourishing salad is made by stuffing prunes with cottage cheese or with American cheese grated and mixed with salad dressing. For a pretty vegetable salad combine string beans and cubed cooked carrots, or you may use the grated raw carrots. The green and yellow colors offer a pleasing contrast. Sometimes it is best to combine all of the ingredients. For example, an interesting vegetable salad is made by draining peas, carrots and celery separately on a lettuce leaf. The green and white colors are more effective separately than if mixed together.

Macaroni Makes Good Salad
Macaroni mixed with apples and celery or with salmon or other fish and pickles makes good combinations. In fact, you can make Macaroni Salad with any combination you would use for potato salad. You will find such a salad stiffer and more appetizing for a hearty supper dish.

Gelatin salads are convenient because they may be made ahead of time, and molded in various ways. Perfection salad, in which celery and cabbage are used, is a seasonal favorite. A clear tomato jelly salad is also delicious, especially at the time of the year when fresh tomatoes are not available.

The apple, celery, and nut combination is probably one of the most convenient and popular of fruit salads. For a little variety, you may combine the apple with chopped peanuts, or add a few raisins or a bit of chopped green pepper. Grape fruit and orange is another favorite served with either French mayonnaise or a cooked dressing. I wonder if you have tried the orange and onion combination that sounds so queer and yet is so well liked? The large white Spanish onions are best for this salad as they become soft in flavor than the small ones. Banana salad may be made a little different by combining peanut butter with the cooked dressing before it is added to the bananas.

His enemies never know just what President Coolidge is thinking about, but they are always tolerably sure he is thinking. Detroit Press.

Why Girls Go Back Home

CATHARINE BRODY

Copyright 1926 by Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

"Why Girls Go Back Home" with Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner production from this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Marie Downey, a country girl as innocent as pretty, thinks that because Clifford Dudley, a matinee idol, kisses her, they have thus become engaged; and naively follows him to New York. Clifford schemes to get rid of the unsophisticated girl without unpleasant publicity. Sally, an actress, befriends Marie, getting her a chorus job. Marie, however, her heart beat faster and she thought of Clifford. Clifford, this announcement leads to the papers and is a bombshell to Clifford's distracted backers, who fear ruin of show.

"You shut your mouth!" snapped Mr. Sheridan. "You made enough trouble. What about that non-engagement or marriage clause in your contract. Yahi! I've a blankety-blank mind to close the show and let you kick up your heels for a season. Serve you right. Yahi!"

Here Mr. Dugan took up the cudgels for his client.

"Well, it is a lie," he argued. "Why don't we call the reporters in and give her the raz. Say she's trying to frame him, see?"

"Yahi!" snarled Mr. Sheridan, "and what about her? Seventeen, did you say, country girl, and cute-looking? Watch the papers eat it up. Great Lover lifts beautiful country fancee! Yahi! Maybe you'd like that. Say, try to get the breaks against a woman in this country. Try, Blank!"

"That," began the press agent softly, "gives me an idea."

He was jumped on in chorus. "Yahi! It's about time."

"What fool idea, now?"

But for the first time that morning, he found courage to smooth down his hair and perk up his chin.

"Let's call Sam in." There was a note of new firmness and courage in his tone, and the others pricked up their ears. Mr. Sheridan himself opened the door and bawled, "Sam!"

One of those anomalous hangers on of theatrical offices, who are apocryphally press agents, and playwrights, and stage managers, but usually just play the role of friend to the producer, made his entrance. ## "What will you get out of it"

That's always in our minds at this store. We know that people like to see a business prosper that considers a customer's return.

If we can get that idea over to you, and if you find that this is that kind of a store, we'll never have to be anxious about our success in it.

"You Want What We Want"

It is important for you, as well as for us, to understand each other on this point. In a way, we're both trying to do the same thing.

You want all you can get for your money in clothes; we want to give all we can give for it.

If we are both in earnest about it, we shall get together, sooner or later.

"The truth is enough"

The best thing about telling the truth in advertising is that it's the easiest thing.

When the merchandise is right and the prices represent the real value to the buyer, the truth is enough.

WOMEN VOTERS CONVENTION NEARING END

(By Universal Service)
ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 19.—Six days of conventioning it beginning to tell on the nerves of the delegates to the 7th session of the National League of Women Voters today. Questions of policy brought sharp differences of opinion to the fore and delegates from the "sovereign state of Pennsylvania" questioned ruling by the chair which they claim tend to string their efforts toward progress.

A majority and minority report on the proposed law enforcement amendment presented on Saturday by the Pennsylvania delegation indicated a lively discussion tomorrow when final action on all resolutions is called for.

OAKS VS. SEALS TODAY
Today will see the two last teams on the list of the Pacific Coast League meet at Oakland. The Oaks, who lost two games to the Sacramento Senators and the San Francisco Seals who split a double header with the Mission Bears on Sunday will meet at the Emeryville park. Baseball fans are on pin points, awaiting the outcome of today's game.

SOCCER FOOTBALL
The Sons of St. George of Oakland defeated the Fruitvale soccer football team at Oakland in one of the closest games of the season Sunday. The final score stood 1-1 for the Sons. In the second game the Merchants defeated the Thistles by a score of 2-1. In the Sons Fruitvale game Hayward, of the Fruitvale team, who had played a wonderful game through out the day had his nose broken during the game.

Rickards, expected "no difficulty" in bringing Dempsey to terms. Rickards is an optimist.

BABE RUTH
With a week of the major league games played, Bambino Ruth, King of Swats has not broken into the line with any home runs. So far Ruth has been hitting them far and often but he has been unable to hit a circuit clout. Bottomely, of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Williams of the Phillies are leading the list with two home runs each.

HUNTER IS CHAMP.
Willie Hunter, the wee British open champion of 1921 took the California open championship Sunday under his wings at Los Angeles on Sunday by turning in a card of 295 for the 72 holes medal play. Hunter's play was not in the least spectacular, but he had that quality that Jerry Travers declares always makes a champion—steadiness. Throughout the long grilling battle with some of the best stars of the state, Hunter played consistent golf and passed over the holes with good scores that others flunked.

Sh!! Scandal Threatens for Straw hat day

More scandal has arisen out of the question of straw hat day. For a few days all seemed to be gloomy for Clinton Smith, for a unknown person had filed a complaint with the Better Business Association, who are staging "Straw Hat Day", charging that Smith refused to sell merchandise. Immediately Ward McRacken and his special staff of secret officers investigated.

Smith admitted all. "Yes, Boys, I wouldn't sell that person a straw hat—you see I stand for principal before profit."

Smith was immediately exonerated from all blame for the incident and was personally congratulated by the members of the Merchant's Association.

Today Smith opens his store and one thing, according to the Merchants Association, he will not sell is straw hats—that is he will not sell them until April 22.

MILWAUKEE, April 19.—It took Bud Taylor all of ten rounds to convince Clever Sencio and some 5,000 customers who gathered to night who he was the boss in this particular job of exchanging right and lefts.

But one final furious assault of rights and lefts blocked by Taylor in the final round carried Sencio before him and sent him back to his corner when the bell ended the contest, a bruised and battered fighting little bit of fighting humanity.

Taylor's margin of victory was complete enough to satisfy, but for more than half of the fight it was Sencio who made the struggle worth while.

R. U. H. S. Nine Wins From the Alhambra Team

The Richmond high school baseball nine took the Alhambra high school of Martinez down the line yesterday afternoon at the Nicholl field by a score of 8-2 in one of the most thrilling games witnessed this year.

Blondy Villalobos was in the box for the local team and he pitched a super-excellent brand of ball throughout the nine innings. Not once did the visitors threaten to pile up a big score. Good support, a thing that the pitchers of the local high nine have missed in the past, was there in abundance.

Guadoni stood behind the bat and took them high, low and other wise. But six scattered hits were collected from Blondy, while the local team came through with five smacks.

Pinto, Guadoni, Johnson, Sac Gordon and Hirth, all added to their collection, a safe single. Zoetly and White were the batteries for the losers.

This new flow of bile, which starts at once, floods the bowels. It relieves constipation quickly—usually within ten hours.

Then bile is an antiseptic. It combats the germs which breed in the flood. A new supply of bile ends countless results of blood impurity.

Lava Stream in Hawaii Burns Up Entire City

was noticeable in the middle stream above.

The noise was mostly a hiss with an occasional puff like a locomotive and very few explosions. A continuous roar was heard later. At the upper road crossing the flow made steady progress, clogging at the sides, a fifty foot river in the middle advancing in the pulsations of rushing and clogging. The mountain house on the upper Honolulano ranch with tanks and outhouses was destroyed by a branch flow. The Koa camp was threatened.

The Waiohinu flow is now reported nearly stopped. Kona of course, is completely cut off by land from Kau and can be reached from Hilo only by sea or around the island to the north. Telephone service is being repaired south of the flow. Shore dwellers and busy gathering fish. Three army airplanes are getting valuable information for ranchers and for those threatened along the road. Hundreds of automobile visitors are being policed on both sides of the flow to keep them from danger.

Monday morning the smoke from that source was strong, also steam from the sea, and an intermittent, slight smoke column probably the front of a branch flow was noticeable.

An observatory expedition is on its way to the source region from Naalehu in charge of observers Finch and Clark.

CITY DESTROYED

(By Universal Service)
Special Cable Dispatch

HONOLULU, T. H., April 19.—A check today showed that eleven houses were wiped out when lava from the volcano Mauna Loa engulfed the village of Hoopulu yesterday.

The lava fills much of the little bay where the fishing canoes of the Hawaiian natives were formerly kept.

The Hawaiians offered gifts in a vain effort to appease Madame Pele, legendary goddess of the volcano.

David Kaananana who lost two houses climbed toward the mountain from the beach with his aged mother hours before the lava flow descended on the village offering prayers and food to Madame Pele. He insisted to the last the flow would pass his house and was finally taken away by force when the Olava covered the family tomb on which considerable money had been spent and which held the dead for several generations. His houses were broken up by boulders and gradually caught fire and were destroyed.

Fish and turtles were seen fleeing as the lava struck the harbor. Pathetic scenes were enacted as the little community broke up some taking such belongings as they could carry to the neighboring village of Kau.

Others drove their pigs, goats and fowls ahead going up the Kona side and made a last sacrifice to Madame Pele. After the flow had mounted the crest of the last hill above the village, a roasted pig was placed in the path of the lava in an effort to appease the volcano's wrath.

A kitten, crazed with the heat singed its hair ran head on into the lava flow.

Army planes flew over the scene photographing the engulfment of the houses and the wharf.

COOLIDGE ASKS ALL TO VOTE

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, April 19.—Facing a country-wide election, which will endorse or disapprove his policy, President Coolidge tonight appealed to the men and women of the nation to vote, their conviction at the polls.

Addressing the annual congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the chief executive warned his hearers that if we are to keep our representative form of government and to maintain the principles that the majority shall rule, it behooves us to take some drastic action to arouse the voters of this country to a greater interest in their civic duties on election day.

Mr. Coolidge pointed out that a drastic decline in voting occurred immediately following the adoption of national woman's suffrage and urged that women play an active part in the campaign to get out the voters.

Private Stock Is Charged to Dry Leaders

as they themselves, have well-filled cellars.

"How many of the men whose names are on this letterhead have liquor in their cellars?" Reed demanded.

"I have never been in their cellars," Smith retorted.

"Well, how many of them have private stocks?"

"But I do know that if any of them had so much as a pint in his cellar, he would be fired off the committee within twenty-four hours. They are pledged to obey all the laws, especially this one."

"I can't say there are not members of the committee who drink," said Smith.

"Well, I can," snorted Reed. "I know they do, and since this law went into effect."

"And they'll be put off the committee if it can be shown they have liquor in their cellars or homes," Smith promised.

Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant Attorney-General of the United States, declared with emphasis to the committee, that prohibition is as a whole, being well enforced; that it can and will be enforced.

"It is 'highly unjust' she stated, to compare states like New York and Maryland, which had no state liquor codes, to commonwealths like Kentucky which present a National Government with fewer cases against the Volstead Act than against the Dyer Anti-auto-theft law.

Attacking Governor Smith of New York, Governor Ritchie of Maryland, George "Boss" Brennan of Chicago and Senators Bruce, Edges and Edwards by name, Bishop James Cannon Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church declared they never can be expected to promote prohibition.

"These men, who now assert the right of the state to handle this traffic," he said "were not in evidence in those days of the crusade to abate the evils of the saloon, which even they do not bare to defend."

He declared that Senator Bruce's assertion in a Senate speech that the wetts will have their liquor, constitution or no constitution, was the defiant challenge to the good morals of this country of the old liquor cliques that want again to debauch public officials and dominate political conditions.

"What do you do for a living?" Reed demanded of Smith, after he had presented the committee of Chicago's wetts to the committee of the city council.

"I preach prohibition, law enforcement and patriotism up and down the country, and I sell automobiles when I have time," replied Smith.

"Do you sell the latter as a guarantee of the present or a provision against the dangers of the hereafter?" said Reed. "Now please tell us the sources of your compensation."

"I am also employed," he said, "by the World Alliance for International Friendship, which has offices at 75 Fifth avenue, and which is strongly in favor of the World Court."

"I see the name of Julius Rosenwald, of Sears-Roebuck on this letterhead of your organization," said Reed. "You know he advertises pocket-flasks and sells them in large quantities?"

"Are all pocket-flasks illegal?" Demanded Smith.

"I never knew any of them to be used to carry perfume around in," said Reed.

"If Mr. Julius Rosenwald has liquor in his cellar he will be put off the committee," said Smith.

"How much money has your organization raised and spent since it was formed in 1923?"

"About $100,000," said Smith. "In 1925 about $50,000 was spent."

"Who are some of your largest contributors?"

"James J. Jarvis, Colonel Charles Sumner Bird, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Colonel Haywood, Julius Rosenwald, Edward L. Hazen, Ralph Harbison of Pittsburgh," said Smith. "How about Mr. Gary? doesn't he contribute?"

"Never a dollar," replied Smith.

"Are you prepared to say that none of them have liquor in their cellars or places for private stocks?" said Reed.

"I don't know," said Smith. "Possibly half of them have. What I said was that they would be put off the committee in twenty-four hours if we knew they had."

"I might like to locate some of them," Reed observed. "They might be agreeable companions. How much money has Mr. Rockefeller contributed?"

"If should say it was under $10,000 in total," said Smith.

"You prout around a good bit, you admit," said Reed. "And you say you have never seen liquor in homes since prohibition?"

"I never saw a still or a home-brew machine except in the hands of officers," said Smith.

"Do you come across any brew itself, or bootleg whiskey?"

"Yet," said Smith. "But what there is, is generally due to lack of enforcement."

"Enough so that a great deal of steam is necessary behind it to make it effective?"

"You should have been in here when I spoke, so that you would know what I said about the weed of adequate enforcement," snapped Smith.

"Yet, I should," Reed admitted. "But this committee does not do me the honor or privilege to wait a few minutes when I am late."

"You have heard something said here about abolishing jury trials in liquor cases as a means to better enforcement," Reed asked.

"There are able lawyers on our committee and some of them would abolish jury trial in order to expedite the law."

"How many of them want to penalize the man who takes the drink?" Reed asked.

"I think some members of the committee would want to make the man who buys the drink equally guilty with the man who sells it," said Smith.

"But you haven't reached the moral attitude of desiring to punish the man who takes it, but who does not buy it?"

"That hasn't been discussed by the committee," said Smith. "But there are some who would punish the man who gets it illegally, whether he buys it or has it given to him. Most of the legal liquor is 'koff,' you know."

"I don't know," said Reed. "I hope it hasn't. But I'm afraid it's getting low."
